Team Tiger is about working together. You'll play games with rules, take on a job for your team, and help with a service project. Being a good teammate is a skill you'll use everywhere.

Requirements

Every official requirement, in plain language. Check the official wording when you sign off (scouting.org/cub-scout-adventures/team-tiger/). Tips and examples are ideas, not extra requirements.

- ☐ 1 Play a game that has rules with your den or family; talk about why rules matter in that game

Tip: Play a game like Red Light, Green Light, then talk about what would happen if there were no rules.

Example: Play musical chairs, then try it with no rules: everyone runs anywhere and grabs any chair. Talk about why the rules made it fair and fun.

- ☐ 2 With your adult partner, pick a job that helps your team and do it at least once

Tip: Pick a den job, like flag holder or cleanup captain, and do it at a meeting.

Example: As cleanup captain, you remind everyone to put supplies away at the end of the meeting, check that the floor is clear, and help the youngest Tigers finish.

- ☐ 3 Play a game of two or more teams with your den or with two other family members; afterward, talk about what being on a team means and what makes a good teammate

Tip: Play a two-team game like tug-of-war or relay, then share one thing a good teammate did.

Example: Play a relay with two teams. Afterward, share what a good teammate did, like cheering for a slow runner, passing the baton gently, or saying "good job" to the other team.

☐ 4 Take part in a service project

Tip: Join your den in a simple service project, like collecting donations or cleaning up a park.

Example: Your den makes cards for a senior center, or collects mittens and hats for a coat drive. You help carry the donations and see where they go.
